

WASHINGTON:
FRIDAY AFTERNOON, DECEMBER 12.

Congress To-Day.

SENATE.—After the presentation of a number of petitions and memorials, Mr. GWIN presented several petitions from citizens of Washington, praying the establishment of a lunatic asylum in the District of Columbia.

Mr. CASS called up his resolution requesting the President to communicate all information in his possession relating to the alleged firing into and seizure of the American steam vessel Prometheus by a British vessel of war in November last, and what measure of redress had been adopted. And after some remarks by Mr. C. in support of it, the resolution was adopted.

The resolution of Mr. UNDERWOOD, directing an inquiry into the expediency of paying Pennsylvania avenue, from 17th street to Georgetown, &c., was taken up and adopted.

The Kossuth welcome resolution was then taken up, and Mr. MALLORY advocated its adoption, and Mr. BADGER opposed it.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—The House stands adjourned until Monday next.

Corcoran & Riggs.

The Republic responds to our interrogatories, relative to the insolent demand of these bankers to be made the sole depositaries of the "House funds," by assuming that our paragraph was written by "Selden, Withers & Co., or some one for them," and that that firm issue "irredeemable paper"—"shipplasters."

Now, that there may be no mistake, we tell the Republic that, having undertaken to answer for Corcoran & Riggs, we will not permit them to make a false issue, nor to dodge the true one. The question before the public, and to which they should respond, is by what right do Corcoran & Riggs demand to be made the sole depositaries of the House funds? In other words it is, what claims have these bankers to the use of the public money? That is the issue, and the Republic shall neither dodge nor blink it. Before we proceed, however, and that we may not be liable to be misunderstood or misrepresented, we deny that our interrogatories were written by Selden, Withers & Co., or by any one for them. They knew no more about them than the editor of the Republic himself.

Upon the subject of "irredeemable issues" and "shipplasters," and of the pretence of opposition to "Selden, Withers & Co.," now set up by the Republic on that account, we venture to say that no one, having any regard for truth, will say that, for all the purposes of a currency, their issues, although redeemable in Virginia funds, are not better in this community than Virginia bank notes; therefore, it is not true that their bank is, as charged, a "shipplaster manufactory."

But let this go. We are not the advocates or partisans of Selden, Withers & Co., nor of the Speaker. Our business is not with them, but with Messrs. Corcoran & Riggs; and our inquiry was made for the country, in the spirit of a free and independent press, resolved to rebuke, as they deserve, the arrogant and insolent pretensions of Corcoran & Riggs, who, in virtue of their association with foreign bankers, have made merchandise of the honor and credit of their country; and, having grown rich by such means, would now use the press to drag down the officers of the government into making them the sole depositaries of the "House funds," and are from day to day using that wealth to exert an undue and corrupting influence over the press, the Congress, and other departments of the government. Our interrogatory presented this issue. And we demand to know what Corcoran & Riggs have done, and who are they, that they are permitted to do these things. This is the issue; and we intend to keep this issue before the public mind until it becomes fully impressed with the fact that we have more to fear from the corrupting influence of these bankers, associated and allied as they are with the financial agents of the despotic governments of Europe, than from any association of incorporated banks in the United States, because they move in the dark. What prevents their giving bribes directly to members of Congress, and to Cabinet ministers? Who is to examine their books? Who is to detect their bargains? Who is to ascertain the manner in which they obtain contracts? Who knows the agents whom they employ to operate upon members of Congress? Who knows what sums flow into their coffers, or the means applied to obtain their contracts? We all know that they have sprung up like a fungus, and we all see and feel the power and influence which their wealth has given them. We ask again, who are they, and what have they done, that justifies their demand to be made the sole depositaries of the "House funds?"

DEATH OF AN OLD CITIZEN.—We regret to learn that Mr. JOHN A. DONOHOO, a well-known and respectable citizen of Washington, departed this life at 8 o'clock this morning, after a very brief illness.

HONORS TO THE MEMORY OF A YOUNG LADY.—We learn from the Nashville papers that Miss Septima Fogg, daughter of the Hon. Francis R. Fogg, State Senator from Davidson county, Tennessee, died at Nashville on the 28th of October. She was the great-granddaughter of Edward Rutledge and Arthur Middleton, two of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and was greatly admired for her intellectual, moral and personal accomplishments. In token of respect for herself and father, both Houses of the Tennessee Legislature adjourned to attend her funeral. This is an honor we have never known paid before to the memory of any young lady.

A MISTAKE.—The name of Mr. Rives, Minister to France, was announced among the passengers home by the Pacific. It is not the minister, but his son, Wm. C. Rives, jr. The first announcement surprised many.

WE find on our table, in neat pamphlet form, a copy of the late Governor McDowell's speech on slavery, delivered at Philadelphia on the evening of the 8th of March, 1851, which was his last public effort, and in which he treats in a full, calm, and masterly manner the important theme before him. It is for sale at Mr. W. Adams' book store on the Avenue near 43d street.

"SHOW PEOPLE!"—The Philadelphia City Item says that some of the papers are raising a murmur of opposition to Lola Montes, and remarks that "if on the score of character the press had always discountenanced performers whose private reputation could not bear its scrutiny, there would, at least, be no inconsistency in censuring the present article. But when we remember the reception given by our press and by our people to the Fanny Ellers, the Mrs. Austins, the Madame Carolines, et al' omne genus; nay—lest our remarks may seem confined only to theatre-going circles—when we remember the applauding moral, pious, and scientific audiences of Dr. Dionysius Lardner, (who was a learned man, and ought to have known better), we must say we do not see any reason for excluding Lola Montes from the general toleration. Jenny Lind, it is true, may be considered as having made private virtue appreciable as a theatrical attraction, to be 'sounded in puffs, and almost to be underlined in the play-bills; but then it was its rarity that, in her case, rendered it thus available. 'Seriously, we are in favor of a high, but consistent, moral tone upon this subject, while we object to occasional and capricious outbreaks against individuals. We do not see that any benefit can accrue to morality by driving a public performer from one calling, and forcing her to adopt a worse one for a livelihood.' These questions will be practically decided by our people for themselves. There are many who profess a desire to witness the performances of the artist, and to care nothing for the woman or the man; and many good men and women thus thinking will in the future, as in the past, behold the spectacle and be amused. Few parents, however, will feel that they have a stronger guarantee of the safety of their children, by observing their attendance upon the exhibitions of this class of persons. Even the most callous would wish to place them under purer and more elevating influences.

Twenty-three Years Ago. We find on our table this morning an interesting relic of the olden time; not so venerable, however, that all the circumstances therein chronicled have been obliterated from the memory of many of our aged citizens. It is a copy of "The Maryland Journal and Baltimore Advertiser," dated "Friday, September 26, 1788." "Printed by W. Goddard."

This newspaper appears to have been an extensive advertising medium for the District of Columbia as well as for Baltimore. We call a few items for the amusement of our readers.

The public are gravely notified that the printer has "Genuine Anderson's Pills for sale."

Robert Peters, Thomas Beale of George, and William Deakins, jr., commissioners, give notice that on the 29th inst., they will let to the lowest bidder, at John Suter's, in Georgetown, the building of a bridge over Rock creek, near said town.

Who does not remember and honor the name and talents of William Wirt? Well, here is an advertisement from him, then "a minor," giving notice of his intention to apply to the General Assembly "for a law to enable him to sell his patrimony, to enable him to complete his literary studies."

Uriah Forrest advertises for sale valuable lots on "Howard's Hill," in "Baltimore town." The Bladenburg Jockey Club Purse of forty guineas will be run on Wednesday, 15th October, as announced by Benjamin Loundes, secretary; and in the next paragraph, "the printer" offers for sale a SEASON on "REGENERATION and GRACE."

Robert Smith, esq., of Baltimore, afterwards Secretary of the Treasury, repels a fierce attack made upon him through the press by a correspondent known only as "Camillus."

In the way of late European news, this paper (dated September 26) has Paris dates of July 3, and London, July 7; New York, September 19, and Philadelphia, September 20.

Jackson Democratic Association. The meeting last night was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. Marsolotti's fine band lent its beautiful strains.

General FORTS defined his position very lucidly, as well as that of the Union men of the South; and undemocratic all who were not for the Union.

General HOUTON was called upon, but "a shocking bad cold" was deemed an adequate apology for his silence. He, however, promised to let them hear from him as soon as his vocal chords could be put in order.

Mr. CARTER, of Ohio, made an animated, lively, and eloquent address, and, as a gentleman at our elbow very truly remarked, gave the Whigs "particular fits!"

F. J. GRUND, esq., was ardent, interesting, and instructive on the Kossuth theme, which he had been requested to discuss.

Mr. OVERTON, of Virginia, announced cheering news from his native State, and promised well for the cause of Democracy throughout the Union.

Speeches were also made by Daniel Radcliff, esq., and Capt. E. B. Robinson.

ANOTHER BENEFICENT DONATION.—We are informed that our fellow-citizen, W. W. Corcoran, esq., has contributed $500 towards the erection of a male orphan asylum about being commenced by our fellow-citizens of the Roman Catholic denomination. To cherish and protect the orphan is a truly righteous office. May all prosper who enter upon it, either by means of their wealth or their labor!

FAIR.—Odd-Fellows' Hall beautiful—goods more beautiful—ladies most beautiful. Go and see them. Remember the cause, to relieve the poor—their advocates, the best and gentlest of their good and gentle sex.

A RUSTIC COLLOQUY.—The Elkhorn (Wis.) Star states, that at a dancing party not a hundred miles from "them diggins" one of the beaux got, as they say, a little "corned," or as some would have it, a little "mellow." He of course felt himself just as good as anybody. Asking a young lady who lives in the vicinity of a grist-mill to dance, she declined; whereupon he said ironically that if he was not good enough to dance with her, he would come down to the mill and be ground over. "Come down," said the lady, who had not to hesitate for technical figures of speech—"come down, but you will recollect that the first process in grinding will be to run you through the emut machine!"

Republican Propagandism.

The New York Tribune quotes with commendation from the Evening Post the following recommendations, to which are appended the initials of Parke Godwin:

Let a grand "Central Association for the promotion of European Liberty" be formed in this city, with branches and affiliations in every village and town, with these objects:

1. To keep alive an interest in the struggles of the European people.
2. To collect funds for their aid, (funds being more important than men.)
3. To correspond with leading Democrats and associations.
4. To assist, equip, and dispatch volunteers, in cases of actual war; and
5. To instruct the Government by what are meanly called petitions—monster petitions I will name them—freighted with the commands of the millions.

But instruct the Government as to what? you will ask. My answer is to instruct it, hay, to demand of it these several things:

1st. The instant and cordial recognition of every republican government de facto, which is able to sustain itself, be it only for three months, in Europe.

2d. A formal protest by the Government, either on its own account or in conjunction with other free powers, against any and every proposed interference of the absolute powers with the lesser, whether at war or at peace. In other words, the assertion by our Government of the most positive determination to prevent the despots from overriding Europe by any overt act.

3d. But, in case they disregard these protests, to lend our aid to the suffering cause; by a national loan, or, what is preferable, by a loan asked from the voluntary contributions of the people; by a supply of ammunition and arms, wherever such a supply would insure success; and, finally, by authorizing the formation and equipment of volunteer military expeditions in behalf of national liberty.

We are desirous that our Government should do all it can in behalf of the republican cause in every land. With the extent of unoccupied land we possess, we can offer asylums to the oppressed. Let us do this. Our people may give sympathy and money. Let them do it. But our Government cannot and ought not to attempt to enter into the strifes of Europe; and, as we have said before, it should not prefer a demand it does not mean to enforce. On our ultimate success in managing our own affairs depends the cause of republicanism in the world.

The mob in New York on Wednesday compelled Howard, of the Irving House, to lower the English flag, which was flying in conjunction with the flags of the United States, Hungary, and Turkey. Why?

We see it stated that the Hon. James Whitfield, Governor of Mississippi, has appointed Col. Tarpley to the vacancy on the bench, caused by Judge Sharkey's resignation. The Vicksburg True Issue says it was offered to Jefferson Davis, who declined.

MADAME BISCACCIANTI.—We regret to learn, by a telegraphic despatch from Baltimore this morning, that this lady will not be able to visit our city and give a concert on Tuesday evening next, as heretofore announced.

COMMUNICATED. Odd-Fellows' Hall.

Messrs. EDITORS: I had the pleasure of stepping in for a few moments last evening, and every thing was cheerful there. Music of the finest kind on those harps; tables of the greatest variety, and every way inviting; and ladies full of smiles and of obliging dispositions. Really, if any one wants to share a happy moment, let him visit this Fair, and add his mite to make the poverty-stricken comfortable. My word for it, if he is not a happier man now, he will be before he dies.

Miss Lydia G. Hall has recovered, in an action before the supreme court, in session at Cambridge, Mass., $1,400 damages of the city of Lowell, for injuries received by her in falling upon the icy sidewalks of that city, by which her thigh bone was broken, and she was confined to her bed for several months.

Dr. J. H. Thornwell has been elected, by the trustees of the South Carolina College, President of that Institution, vice the Hon. W. C. Preston, resigned. The Rev. J. L. Reynolds, formerly Professor of Belle Lettres in the Furman University, has also been elected Professor of Sacred Literature, vice Dr. J. H. Thornwell, resigned.

The Wheeling Argus of a recent date remarked that it depended on Virginia whether Mr. Fillmore "would remain on the track or not." If so he'll soon slip off the T-iron.

PRIVATE NOTE FOR WASHINGTON TELEGRAPH. Our markets looked admirable yesterday morning, and were well filled with meat, vegetables, and handsome ladies. We hadn't time to price any of the articles exposed for sale, as we were on an errand for a lady.—Phil. Sun.

We have a public note for you, Mr. Sun. As soon as you perform your errand for a lady, compare items with us and see if your citizens are, as they often boast, better fed than ours, or at smaller cost. Our markets also are full of handsome ladies; but handsome ladies never send us on an errand—they love to have us near them.

Latest European Items. GERMANY.—The new King of Hanover has dismissed his cabinet, which has caused much surprise, in consequence of having recently announced his intention to retain all public servants. Intimations have been given that he intended to violate the integrity of the constitution.

ITALY.—The French army of Italy has been concentrated at all the garrisons, and harangued. It has been enjoined on the troops, under any contingency, always to protect the person of the Pope.

IRELAND.—The quays of Dublin continue to be crowded with emigrants, seeking conveyance to America.

Good Advice.—We know not who gives it, but here it is:

The season of the year is approaching when old debts should be paid. If you are in debt at the store, make your calculations to pay it by Christmas. If you owe the tailor, shoemaker, or other mechanic, pay him. If you neglect this and spend your money in buying carriages, furniture for your house, or fine apparel for yourself or family, you are not honest. The world is guilty of many acts that are not called by their right name. It is not honest to pay liberally even to build a church, when needy mechanics are suffering in business and comfort for what you honestly owe them. Be honest first, then liberal and charitable. The great debt in this country is with farmers and mechanics. Let them keep square with the merchant, and avoid the sinful desire of coveting their neighbor's farm, and no commercial or pecuniary convulsions can trouble us.
